INTRODUCTION:

You do not need to look further. You may scream "Eureka" (I found it!) and press that button. Your report on that wanted person is a second and a few bucks away. Yes – he could be your destiny! Or your wife's lover. Or someone who molested you and you want to know all his gray secrets. Or you simply met somebody cool, and you want to know all the juicy details. And you don't need a psychic investigator to do it. You just need the World Wide Web, which is a fundamental human right already. The Internet has turned the world into a big village – everyone is just a click away, and we know more things about each other than ever before. We want to know more – about our spouses, coworkers or even that cute girl from Friday evening, who forgot to disclose her phone number. Well, it's not such a fuss as you might expect. Be warned – it might turn into an indulgence!

What is Lookup and How Does It Look?

Are you prone to reading detective comic books? Did you dream to be a lawyer when you were an adolescent? Then, there is this dormant desire in you to know even the dirty secrets of people. Can you imagine what happens if you are unable to get everybody tell you the truth? 33 years ago that presented an issue. Now we have got the Internet! You can check on your fiancée and see if she is that a notorious catch!

Lookup – What Is This Anyway?

Definition: Lookup, otherwise known as people search is a form of investigation of an individual to receive their contacts and other personal data.

"Investigation?" Isabelle laughed.
"Now we're detectives? Maybe we should all have code names."
"Good idea," said Jace. "I shall be Baron Hotschaft Von Hugenstein."
— Cassandra Clare

The old detective souls are nowadays known as "information brokers" or "data brokers" and what they do is to collect information about us, ordinary people, primarily. A hacker is an example of a data broker, for he also gathers information in the form of passwords and corporate secrets. If any job prides itself on accuracy that's the job of the information broker - he is skilled in some areas, which when united, give you the best chance to obtain the information you need. He uses a lot of online, offline and other techniques depending on his client's requirements. He has to be able to collect, analyze and store massive amounts of data, usually about individuals. He is the correct professional when you search for something.

Fact: About 10 percent of the people in the world have got files on them at the data broker company Axiom based in the USA. Look them up, for they are the leading company that deals with this exclusively expensive business.

So Why Do I Need A Lookup?

You might want to poke your nose in other people's affairs for a bounty of reasons:

- You may want to meet your neighbor without being particular about etiquette.
- You may be interested in genealogy and want to find all your cousins.
- You want to stay in contact with an old chap or a colleague, to connect with your classmates or old contacts.
- You wish to track somebody down. He could be your biological father you have never met or your grandfather from Trinidad. Many people want to find their missing relatives, old friends, a long-lost daughter, or simply Bobby McGee.

It's not that complicated as you think, in fact, it is easier than ever before. There are hundreds of websites out there, which provide this service for a small amount of money.

It doesn't have to be hard.

Learn To Do Lookup The Smart Way

"Elementary, my dear Watson!"
Sherlock Holmes

You don't need to be a detective nowadays if you want to learn about certain people. But since there are many websites out there featuring look up, take some time and look around for the best bargain. No one wants to spend this much money on lookup; some do it for peanuts.

Many of these services want some registration. Make sure it didn't charge your credit card for a one year period when all you wanted was to check on your ex-boyfriend's new girlfriend.

Most of the online services work best to find somebody who is still alive. If you are digging stuff about someone who is deceased, you may want to start with a simple Google search.

What Everyone Ought To Know About Lookup- The Terms Of The Craft

Reverse Phone Lookup

A lot of people are troubled with unsolicited phone calls by intruders. But the Empire can strike back gently! Would you like to know who owns a particular phone number? That's very easy. Know that you are in need of the service called: Reverse Phone Lookup. You shouldn't mind paying a small fee for the free services will not reveal the full scoop. Intelius and Spokeo seem to be among the least shady premium websites, by user testimonials.

Name and Address Lookup

That's the most common form of lookup online. If you have the first and last name of a person and their city or ZIP, chances are you may find whatever else you need about them such as their full name, full address, mainland phone, maps and driving directions.

Address History

Most Americans trot about the globe their entire lifetimes. They are in love with movement and change. They live in white, neat houses with swans and dwarves in the garden, and one day – they pick all their possessions, and just head to their next location. Therefore, they have a whole file of what is called Address History – which is all the places they have lived in.

Email Address Lookup

First, be aware that your search is 100% private, and no one will notify the person that you are checking on them. You have to pay for the social media profiles related to that profile. Best Deals start at $5 a month for a 6-month membership at Spokeo. Again look for options, if you haven't planned these expenses.

VIN Lookup

VIN is an abbreviation which stands for Vehicle Identification Number. That's a number every car has, no two vehicles in operation have the same VIN. You may look up a car's e history by its number, but that just like sugar, spice and everything nice is not a free option.

IP Search

If you wish to undress a hacker of his anonymity, you have to deal a lot with IP addresses. If you can find the IP address of an Internet user you can find out in what part of the world they're in and some general details about his or her location.

Sex Offender Search

Maybe it's wise to google the sex offenders of your area. The website of the US Department Of Justice, <https://www.nsopw.gov/> is the public safety resource used by 60 million people and on the landing page there is a quick search by name or location which returns all kinds of data on criminals. You get their SID, sex, race, ethnicity, body description and a picture, their addresses, and their offenses.

Yellow Pages

Yellow Pages is the neatest way of finding a service online; that operates close to anywhere. If you do know what you are searching for, enter it in the box, press the search button and you are provided with hundreds of solutions to your problem, immediately. If you are not confident what you are looking for, you may proceed directly with the City Guide below. Say you want to learn about businesses and activities going on in the Chicago area. You will come upon all those brands that have made the Windy City what it is – jazz, pizza, football teams, China town. You see all the keywords for local trends such as gay bars, perfume manufacturers, wheelchairs, air conditioning, shoes, rocks and minerals, hats, rentals: thousands of them – the search returns 100 pages of keywords. From the ads in the yellow pages, one might learn how to end their comfort problems with just one phone call.

White Pages

Yellow Page's sister site White Pages is the people-finder option of this excellent service. It is has got a premium share, which is directed exclusively to users located in the United States. What you can access, though is the Reverse Phone Lookup service, which allows you to find the address of a particular person, and if you are an American resident and willing to pay for the premium details – you might as well get their name and address. You also have got an option to report this number – if you hate the person, or if they harassed you, you may leave a comment about them, which will be visible to users of White Pages.

Lookup Made Simple – Even Your Kids Can Do It

How? Social media.

"You are what you share."
— Charles Leadbeater (We Think:
The Power Of Mass Creativity)

You don't need to spend hours on finding somebody's contact details. Sit back in your comfy chair in front of the computer and open Facebook. Millions of people start the day like this with their morning coffee and a snack. You can search by name and email address, but oh, the appetizing details you can learn about people from their social profiles: You know what people have eaten, how they feel, what they have done the night before and what will they do tomorrow night. They even show pictures of their family, their dog, and themselves gardening, or spending time in the pool. You will even know what they like about other people's stuff, their dirty linens, and their knickers.

Seriously, social networks are these intricate media of beauty, and they're so elaborate and so complicated, and so full of yummy details, and even gossips. They are a means of people to use their ingenuity and creativity by connecting with each other. They are what can make us feel we are:

"Distracted from distraction by distraction."
— T.S. Eliot

Facebook

It's the largest social network with over than 500 million people.

Among its fantastic options is the advanced people search – you can find a long lost friend by only his name or email address, and you can see how he has developed in all these years.

Twitter

We love Twitter and do make enthusiastic and regular use of this platform every day to boost our personal brands and strengthen valuable relationships. A tweet shares a thought, quote, inspiration, or a multimedia link. It's an opportunity for people to share what they like to do: you may tweet a song, movie, wine recommendation, a recipe or the photos from a recent vacation. It's a great way to enjoy the life of your favorite stars and businesses.

Google +

It is meant to be something between Facebook and Twitter designed to make sharing easy and natural, and it collects people's individual profiles – including a photo, occupation, skills, and employment details. Google + works non-stop to make a difference, to make things better than they already are.

Tumblr

"I wish I knew how to quit you,
Tumblr."
— John Green

Tumblr is 295 millions of different blogs, filled with practically whatever. It's so easy to use that it's hard to explain. It's a creative platform, and it helps users learn about each other's hobbies and interests through pictures and conversations, like a good book.

Pinterest

Pinterest is the ever growing social media which appeals mainly to women. It is used by these ladies to promote their personal brands, so you can look up distinct businesses on Pinterest and track down their owners. They discuss wine, food, travel, style and entertainment, and all with the mission to entertain, educate, inform and inspire women.

Linkedin

Relationships are at the foundation of any business – with your customers, vendors, employees, or the general public. LinkedIn is a social network of professional relationships, and it allows you to cultivate some meaningful friendships over time. It can be used to find your ex-colleagues, or connect to your college friends. Each of them has a new and fantastic job, each of them can help you ascend the stairs of success.

Lookup Websites

There are dozens of websites out there who have plenty of similar options, of which we have listed some of the best free internet sites. Paid sites contain much more information, are often updated, and their prices vary based on popularity.

Most universities present People Search Services for their staff and students, and it's a lovely social feature.

Civil Records and Governmental Websites

Google with the search word "repository", or the domain ".gov" – that should take you to your state's individual data collections. These are state sites, but you usually pay for bits of information on them, as in the premium people finder sites.

A Few Peoplefinders that you may use

Have in mind that this list is by no means comprehensive, since there are hundreds of such websites online, and they are all very easy to find in search engines with the keywords: "people lookup" or "people search."

Fear? Not If You Think of Lookup The Right Way

You are who the Internet says you are – true or false?

Identity is a precious stock. Those who believe in magick, think that if you know an entity's actual name you can evoke that being. If you own a company, one of your significant investments will be in your security and identity. The free information websites present major problems with current security models.

Any given people finder website will provide anyone with your name, date of birth, names of family names, current and past addresses, phone number and gender. Some of the sites add to that your hobbies, your social profiles, your marital status and maps or a photo of your house.

Wonderful? Absolutely.

Now you can google yourself.

Just to find out that there are ten other people with your name and their lives, and occupations and achievements make you feel awkward or blessed.

There is no need to fear.

Besides, here is a beautiful solution: Go to Who-Me? (www.who-me.com)

This promising website provides what is called "reverse people finding." Yes, you can check if somebody is spying on you by entering a few details about yourself. Now, that's fascinating, isn't it?

Marriage and Lookup Have More In Common Than You Think

"Very strange things comes to our knowledge in families, miss; bless your heart, what you would think to be a phenomenon, quite ... Aye, and even in gen-teel families, in high families, in great families ... and you have no idea ... what games goes on!"

– Charles Dickens, Bleak House

You have no idea what's cooking. That's called marriage.

Sometimes, you have to perform checks on your important other.

Every year in the USA, 2 million couples decide to spend their lives together and not to have sex with anyone else ever. They stand before God and vow that nothing will break their love and devotion. They promise to have and to hold each other through all the troubles in the world, and people drink toasts to their health even if they know half of them will divorce within ten years.

Is there a crisis in the American marriage?
Has Love got a chance in today's hot pursuit of pleasure?

Some Americans even experiment with a European technique famous as "marriage counseling" What the counselors tell them is that they should try to make the marriage more fun by:

- Not taking everything for granted
- Making a habit of dating

- Singing a duet together or going to a dance class
- Watching emotional movies together
- And all that jazz...

But what is the ultimate reason for divorce? For the sake of boredom or disrespect? No – most often it's cheating. But why do we cheat? Is the affair necessarily the end of a relationship?

Once upon a time, a divorced woman was a disgraced woman. Women are the traditional guardians of the home, and there is an assumption that they need marriage more than men for both financial and emotional reasons. And here are the basics grounds of divorce:

- Unsatisfying sexual relationship with the wife
- Emotional dissatisfaction

And we think men are the "less passionate sex."

How can we find out about it? Think your husband will confess?

Here's where people finder sites come to play. You can use reverse phone check-up and trace his calls after you see the lipstick on his collar. If you find about this infamous act of infidelity, you have two options – to divorce the man and get into the records, or to give him a chance to regain your trust.

But how does a jealous woman deal with it? You think that can't happen to great, awesome women? Actresses such as Bettie Davis, Joan Crawford, Hallie Berry, Hillary Swank, Sandra Bullock, Reese Witherspoon - all of them had a divorce after getting their Oscar statuette for best Actress: people called the phenomenon the Oscar Curse.

You do not prevent it. You are jealous; he is cheating. You move on.

"Divorce isn't such a tragedy. Tragedy's staying in an unhappy marriage, teaching your children the wrong things about love. Nobody ever died of divorce."
– Jennifer Weiner (Fly Away Home)

That said, divorce is then just the safety option out of a couple that is trapped in a loveless union.

WORK HARD PLAY HARD

Tracking down people can prove to be a lot of fun.

So sit back, sip coffee and prepare to learn some new names.

Names have power.

For those who have a sweet tooth for linguistics – wherever there are names and numbers – there is a beauty. If you choose to play with Spy Dealer, you might learn a lot of new names. If you knew how much names speak of the potential of their owners, you would fall in love with etymology. Here are just a few names of our favorite literary characters to get you going in this amazing science.

Given Character Name	Book	Name Etymology and Meaning:
Alice	Alice in Wonderland	(Comes from German) Woman of the nobility; truthful; having high moral character
Andre Louis	Scaramouche	Andre – a variation of Andrew – from Greek it means one who is mainly, a warrior. Louis also stands for a famous warrior
Anna	Anna Karenina	(Comes from Latin) A woman graced with God’s favor
Bella	Twilight	(Slavic) A white skinned woman
Bridget	Bridget Jones’s Diary	(Comes from Irish) A vigorous and protective woman, in mythology goddess of fire, wisdom and poetry
Catherine	Wuthering Heights	(Comes from English) One who is pure, virginal
Clark	Superman	(Comes from English) A cleric, a clerk
Conan	Weird Tales	(Comes from English) Resembling a wolf, one who is high and mighty
Hamlet	Hamlet	(Comes from German) From the little home

Mythology and culture are the bases for most contemporary names. Aaron, Eve, Sarah, John, Elija, Rachel, Zion, Samuel, Rebecca, Isaiah and Delilah, for example, are taken right from the Bible. We name our children after the characters we love, or the Nobel Prize winners, hoping that their given name will be essential for their spiritual qualities and self-realization.

CONCLUSION

Have in mind that without eye-contact you cannot say much about a person whatever data you manage to dig about him. Nothing is more precious than face to face contact.

So now that you have got this vital information about the other person, it’s time to meet them and express your interest.

“It could be the beginning of a beautiful friendship.”
